Bio

Jack Hartung received his bachelor's degree from Grinnell College and was graduated with a doctorate in Synthetic Chemistry from the University of California, Berkeley.

After completing his degrees he joined Independent Project Analysis, Inc. (IPA) as an analyst, where initially he specialized in conducting evaluations of innovative, first-of-a-kind process technology projects. During his career at IPA, Jack held a variety of positions including Global Manager, Specialty Chemicals, Deputy Director, Europe, and Managing Director, Australasia.

Jack then joined Chevron Corporation as Manager, Benchmarking and Cost Engineering which entailed developing and maintaining Chevron's Cost Engineering capabilities for major capital projects.

Currently, Jack holds the position of Manager, Project Assurance in Chevron's Project Resources Company where he oversees project development and execution assurance functions including cost and schedule validation, risk assessments, peer reviews, and project retrospective reviews among others for all major capital projects both upstream and down.
